Are You a Helicopter Parent?

Understand the Signs and Change your Pattern.

The Voice Coach

Are you answering questions the preschool teacher is asking your child?

It actually makes her feel unheard and not valued.

Instead:

Let her use their own voice, with her own words and own opinion. She'll learn the value of being heard and expressing herself.

The Hoverer

Do you have nervous while child is climbing on the Play Structure at the park, telling them repeatedly to be careful or not to climb so high?

It actually makes them feel more fearful and unwilling to take risks.

Instead:

Let them Climb! Allow them the freedom to explore in a safe environment - they'll learn competence and confidence.

The Meal Manager

Do you cut up your child's food, pour his water, and serve him his own vegetables?

It may make him feel incompetents in his own abilities.

Instead:

Allow him to use child -size knives, fail, try again, and repeat until successful. He'll learn resilience and autonomy.

The Umpire

Do you retrieve your child's toy from another child who snatches it away?

Doing so will make him feel he can't handle problems with others on his own.

Instead:

Let him work through his own battles. He'll learn the power of problem solving.

You get heart palpitations at the thought of letting your child go on a field trip with their class.

As a Christmas gift you gave your daycare a webcam so you could watch the daily happenings while you are at work.

The Fix-It-Upper

Are you quick to find the missing puzzle piece for your child upon the slightest struggle? It makes them feel like they can't solve their own problems.

Instead:

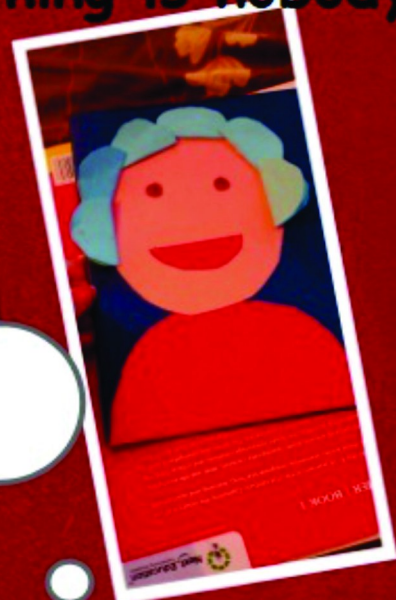

Let them tackle some things on their own, even if they get a little frustrated! They'll learn accountability and responsibility.

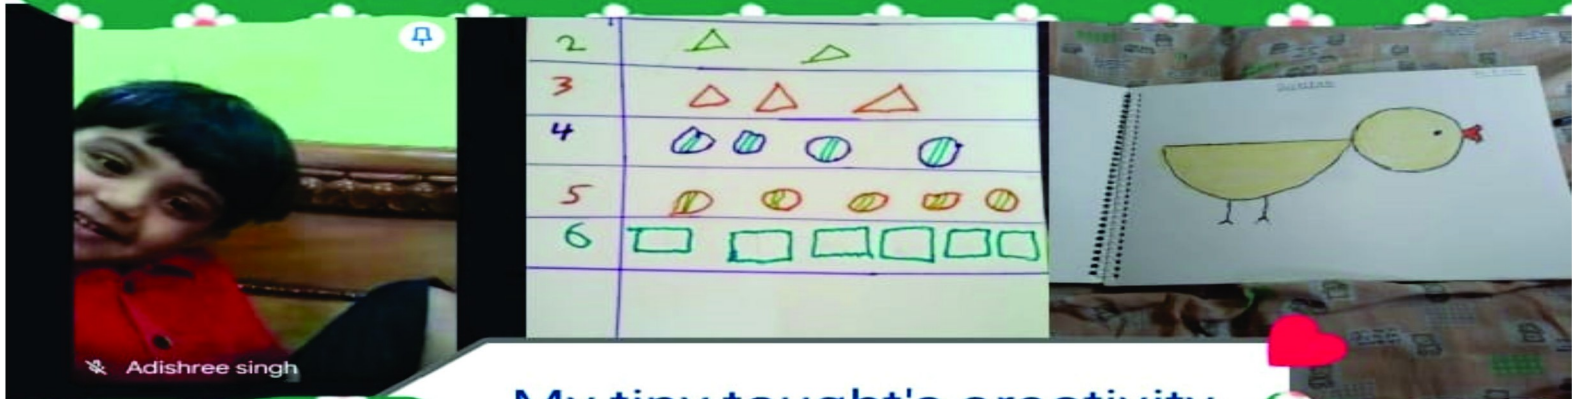

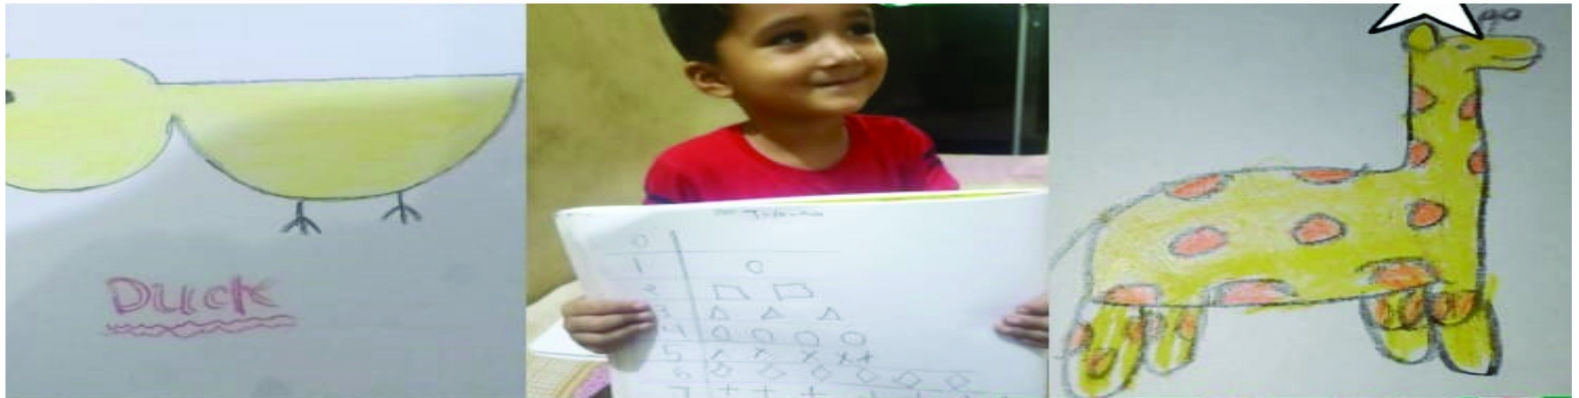

The beautiful thing about learning is nobody can take it away from you.

Kindergarten educational approach is based on playing, singing, practical activities such as drawing, and social interaction as part of the transition from home to school. The word kindergarten comes from the German language. Kinder means children and garten means garden. Friedrich Froebel (1782-1852) felt children needed to be nurtured and caringly tended to, like plants in a garden. Hence, he founded an early education program for young children, started the first kindergarten, Garden of Children.

“Children are like tiny flowers; they are varied and need care, but each is beautiful alone and glorious when seen in the community of peers.”

Teachers act as a facilitator and have great patience and passion to deal with children.

My Daily Reward

Teaching is a very rewarding profession. This year I have enjoyed watching my little ones as they've learned new concepts and progressed both academically and socially in the Virtual platform. It is amazing to know that my teaching is the foundation for their entire educational experience. Even though I'm often faced with deep responsibilities and challenges, there's not another job I would love more than positively impacting the life of a child! It is a blessing each day to be surrounded by children who trust me with their smiles, with their sweet words, and so much more! As I sit here reflecting on this school year, I can't help but think about the many hats I wear as a teacher. Yes, it's true, there's no one quite like a kindergarten teacher. We are not just teachers anymore; we take on many roles. This year I have to admit that there were times I felt I was spread too thinly over too many situations. During this time, it really helped to have such a supportive team of teachers who were experiencing the same or similar situations. With their support, I was often able to turn my lemons into lemonade. Each day I also reminded myself of why I became a teacher and kept this reason close to my heart. When you're making a difference in the life of a child, all the stress really can be worth it!
